

BUY All woolen Goods NOW

Because of the alarming scarcity of wool and the fact that the Government is requiring a large percent of the supply on hand, prices of woolen goods will soon be much higher than at the present.

Prudent buyers will forestall this rise by buying all woolen goods now, and buy in such quantities as will be likely to carry them for some time.

We still have a limited supply of the best at present prices. Buy before prices jump and while we have an assortment.

Miss Genevieve McMeel left Tuesday for Leavenworth Kansas. Miss McMeel is the first Meade County girl to enter the services of the Government as a nurse, and being a graduate at the time of entering, her services in that capacity will immediately be of value to her country. Two sons of Mr. and Mrs. B. S. McMeel are already in the service and Genevieve going adds the third star. The best wishes of all Meade county go with her.

Word from Bill Dettle says he is now assisting in the running of Uncle Sam's railroad in France.

Harry French, now stationed at Camp Funston, arrived in Meade Sunday for a few days' furlough.

Chas. Flemming and Dell Sloss left Sunday evening for Baltimore, Maryland, where they go to assist in building ships for Uncle Sam.

Word from Archie Fee, who is at Camp Bowie, states that the most sensational happening in the camp for some time has been created by the capture of a spy at Base Hospital, who has been there for some time under the guise of a Red Cross nurse. He states that for some time this individual has been suspected, but only a few days ago did they find direct evidence as to her guilt. What the United States Government will do with this feminine aid of the kaiser remains to be seen.

The following letter was written by E. U. Snyder, formerly an employee of the W. F. Casteen & Co. store:

Mr. R. F. Todd,

Meade, Kansas.

Dear Friend:

This is from the trenches in France. I am now in a dugout and I can hear the guns of Fritz roar. He is at the present time shelling to our right on some other sector than our own. This Hun is quite a man and one of the biggest cowards that was ever invented, and one who finds things all O. K. when it all is his way. One of his main holds is gas and he believes in sprinkling it around in his attacks with his big guns. That is, when he thinks he can make a surprise attack, but the Sammies are on the alert at all times. We have had a little of his gas attacks but no casualties so far; a few gassed men but not many and we are not going to be caught if we can keep from it. Our guns are sending over a few to Fritz now. We try to give him six souvenirs to his one. Heretofore it has been the other way but the Americans are in it now and watch us; we are going to win. I know the people in the states believe in us.

France is a very pretty country; have only seen a small portion of it. I have not been in any large cities, only small villages. There is any number of them, as there are no farm houses in this country. The farmers live in the towns or small villages, as they are called here, and another thing when you see a village the houses are all built together. The people live in one end and the stock in the other, also the chickens, ducks, and all things, including the smell with it, and that is the main thing.

I am in Co. Cass N. C. O. My duties are to take care of the gas when Fritz sends it over, that is give the alarm. It is all I have to contend with. I am up at nights as that is the time for a surprise attack from the enemy. It is easy now, all I have to do is to inspect the gas masks the men have and keep them in good condition, but when the Hun gives us his gas, well my work sets in.

It is now 11:30 p. m. and a long time till morning. What may happen between now and then I don't know, but if we have to go for him remember we will give him all we have, for the ones at home and for ourselves. This is my second trip here in the trenches. We only put in a certain number of days and then we are relieved and go to reserves. There we get a chance to clean up and get rid of the cooties. They are nice to have around, also we

$15,000 F. O. B. FRANCE!

Issued by the Censor. Copyright 1918

"Ready for the Hun." One of our airmen in his fighting clothes. This boy—for most of our best air fighters are nothing more—cost, trained and delivered F. O. B. the Front, the proceeds of $15,000 in Liberty Bonds.

The air fight was almost over the American aerodrome. Far above, ten thousand feet it seemed, two tiny specks were whirling and looping around each other. One of them was American, the other German, but so high were they that the inexperienced eye could not tell which was which. One of them dropped out of the fight. Whirling and dipping, for all of the world like a leaf dropping from a tree, it idled toward the earth. The other came diving down in pursuit.

Suddenly the falling plane straightened out, the other just behind it. With a beautiful loop the first one turned backward and down again, the trick putting it just above and behind its pursuer. A slight sound could be heard from below, much like the tearing of a bit of cloth—the rattle of its machine gun. The fight was over in a second. A burst of flame, fourth Liberty Loan.

It was the buyer of $15,000 in Liberty Bonds that enabled Uncle Sam to train this victor in that morning's fight—a battle which saved an artillery observation plane from destruction by the Hun. The tiny scout plane which the boy piloted was bought with the proceeds of $10,000 in bonds.

These boys need the co-operation of big brothers over here who will send their fighting dollars to aid them in their battles. They need machine guns, each costing $200 in bonds. They need ammunition for which a $50 bond pays for only two minutes of firing, and they need more planes and pilots which will be paid for with the fighting dollars of the "Fighting Fourth" Liberty Loan.
